To Exhibit Stone Age Relics At Centennial

The following article was prepared by E. R. Bondley for the historical committee of the Marion centennial organization.

The study of archaeology as applied to primitive man, is divided into three periods, the stone, bronze and iron period.

The stone period as the name implies is that in which the rude art of primitive man, which his commonest necessities call into operation, are assumed to have been employed on such available materials as stone, bone, horn, etc.

The stone period is subdivided into two divisions, the Palaeolithic and the Neolithic period. The latter is the one in which we as Marionites, are most interested, and on which this article will treat.

Thousands of years in the prehistoric past, America was inhabited by a race of people belonging to the eddike period of the stone age. Whence they came, whether they have gone, is and may always remain a mystery. The hundreds of earth and stone mounds built on the bluffs along the streams and the millions of stone implements found on the surface of the fields and in the valleys that border the streams are proof of their existence. That these ancient people were very numerous in the territory of which Ohio is part is shown by research work at the Ohio Archaeological and Historical society, which has located within the boundaries of Ohio, more mounds, earth works, village sites, rock shelters, work shops and burial grounds than exist in any other state in the union. The Scioto Valley seems to have been their favorite abode and hunting ground, for in this valley are found the greater number of their mounds, village sites and as Marion county lies in the beautiful valley of the Scioto river it contains a goodly share of the monuments of these ancient people. There are at present, about forty collections of stone implements, of this ancient race in Marion and Marion county.

Contain Interesting Tools.

They contain many interesting and beautiful works of art of this prehistoric race and so closely do their tools and weapons resemble those of the stone age of ancient Europe it requires a practiced eye to distinguish the stone axe or flint lancehead from those of the stone period of Britain, Denmark, Polynesian Islands, Switzerland and France. One would almost conclude that the races were closely related.

The stone implements of prehistoric man, may be divided into two general classes, implements made from stone by the chipping process, and implements made from stone by pecking and grinding. Implements such as projectiles—arrow and spear points—drills, scrapers, knives, hoes and certain ornaments, were made by the chipping process from such materials as flint, jasper, quartz, obsidian. Projectiles are most common and are found by thousands in the fields along the streams in Marion county. They were used in warfare and in procuring fish and game. They vary in length from one-half to ten inches. In color they range from black and white to all the colors of the rainbow. Some are leaf shape and others notched, barbed and stemmed. Some are very pointed and have serrated edges and still others have the two opposite edges beveled, which gives them a rotary motion and greater penetrating power. Some are very blunt, and were used to skin small game so it could be taken alive. Some are very rude and others show the skilled hand of the artist.

Implements made by the pecking and grinding process required great skill and it was a long and tedious process. Some of these implements are the hammer, axe, pestle, discoidae, pipe, cell and numerous ornaments and implements of unknown use. Of these the stone hammer was a very necessary implement of the prehistoric man. It was used in battering, chipping and pecking rough materials into shape for the final process of rubbing and polishing. The hammer as a rule, is made from quartzite but varies according to the material to be worked. Its form varies from the round pebble to be held in the hand, flattened disks, into grooved forms to which handles were fastened. Ancient man fashioned nearly all of his stone weapons, ceremonial pipes, by the use of the stone hammer, which in the more artistic ceremonial weapons and effigy ceremonial required a very delicate manipulation.

Pestle Important.

The pestle is another important implement of ancient man. It is also made of hard material and was used in the grinding of corn, nut seeds, roots and herbs. Its form varies from the elongated roller pestle, used in a deep mortar, from the mere cones with flattened bases which were used for surface grinding, to the beautiful type of the upright or bell-shaped pestle. Some of the later are well wrought, have graceful and symmetrical curves and are highly polished. Cells or stone hatchets are among the more common and numerous implements. They are chisel shaped with a beveled cutting edge, as a rule wider at the blade than at the top, some are round, others have flat sides. They range in weight from a few ounces to several pounds and are made from quartzite, flint, granite, serpentine, porphyry, slate and calcareous material. They vary from rough pecked specimens to highly polished and beautiful forms. The rough ones were used in the process of manufacture while the finer ones were used as tools for cutting and scraping. The grooved type was used both as a weapon and an implement and varies in weight from a few ounces to twenty-five or more pounds. It was generally made from a stone that required the least and tedious process of pecking and grinding. Although chipped specimens of flint, quartz, jasper and obsidian are occasionally found, the materials generally used in its manufacture are stone, sandstone, granite, porphyry and serpentine. It is usually hematite was used. The general design of the stone axe remains the same, and the modern steel axe is of the same design as that used by ancient man. In fact nearly all the tools used by modern man such as the hammer, chisel, gauge, hatchet and drills are patterned more or less after those used by his ancient brother. Stone axes are found rude and finished, large and small, oval and square, rough and highly polished, some with grooves on one or two

ACOSTA HIGH SCHOOL CHARTER IS REVOKED

W. B. Bliss Makes Announcement Today at Columbus.

STATES REPORT WILL BE MADE IN FEW DAYS

Refuses To Add to Announcement—Residents Say Lack of Cooperation Charged.

Announcement that the high-school charter of the Acosta Centralized school had been taken away Thursday was made today at Columbus by W. B. Bliss, Columbus, assistant to the state superintendent of public instruction.

Mr. Bliss would not add to the statement that the charter had been revoked. He stated that his report of the matter will not be made until next week and a copy of it will be sent to the president of the district board of education, the principal of the Acosta school and the county superintendent's office. Acosta residents stated that the only reason given by Mr. Bliss Thursday for his action was alleged lack of cooperation on the part of the school

COMEDIES REPEATED
FRIDAY EVENING

Approximately $225 Cleared by Two Performances.

The two comedies presented by members of the seventh and ninth grades at Vernon Heights Junior High school Thursday night at the auditorium of the Central Junior High school, were again presented Friday night to a crowd that packed the house. The attendance last night was larger than the one night before last. Approximately $225 was cleared on the two shows and from a candy sale held by girls of the ninth grade in connection with the show last night. The two plays were "The Affairs of Compique," a one-act comedy given in French, and "Uncle Ephraim's Summer Boarders," a two-act comedy.
The proceeds from the show and the candy sale are to be used to buy pictures for the Vernon Heights Junior High school.

Q.—What is a "dissolve" and what is a "fadeout" in the movies?

A.—A "dissolve" is a scene revealed gradually by opening the diaphragm of the camera. The picture begins dimly and small, then gradually gets clearer, bigger and brighter. A "fadeout" is just the reverse. In a "fadeout," the diaphragm of the camera is gradually smaller and dimmer until it finally fades out.

VLADIVOSTOK CITY OF EXTREME CONTRASTS

Normal Development Arrested by the World War.

HUMAN LIFE CHEAP IN CITY OF GOLDEN HORN

Living Extremely Dear, City Dependent on Supplies from the Outside.

Washington, April 8.—"On the eight-day trip from Moscow she had told fellow passengers on the trans-Siberian railway of an Englishman who was disappointed because he spent ten days in New York and had not seen an Indian.

"Just before alighting at the terminal city of the longest railroad in the world she inquired, 'Is there much danger from wolves in Vladiv-ostok?'"

"Not only is there about as much danger of meeting a wolf in Vladiv-ostok as there would be of encountering a mountain lion in San Francisco; but there are other likenesses between these port cities, especially if the Vladivostok of just before the war be compared with the San Francisco of its earlier, hardy coast days," according to a bulletin from the Washington headquarters of the National Geographic society.

Breaks All Civic Rules.

"Small wonder living was extremely dear in the old days and is an acute problem now, since the city subsisted formerly on supplies from China and Japan, Europe and even America. Its growth seems due to some inexplicable exception that proves the rule that a city, to succeed, should be self-sustaining.
Interchange products with the country around it be thrifty, continue civil consequences, be well governed, and possess some racial, cultural, or patriotic unity. It owed its commerce to the fact that it was the most nearly freeport of Siberia, by which virtue it became the terminus of the trans-Siberian railway, and to the military and naval establishments maintained by the government of the Tsar.

"Now its patron government has disappeared, its railway has been cut into units by the national entities along its course, and Robberbarons as an economic as well tory rail ribbon that once extended between trophy victims and American millionaires. Huge piles of war material were massed there before the revolution came—scores of automobiles, mountains of car wheels, and square miles of barbed wire.

Contrasts Are Extreme.

"Even in ordinary times Vladiv-ostok is a city of extreme contrasts, as might be expected of a place where Chinaman and Russian compete, where East literally meets West. Alighting at the European-looking station, from one of the most luxurious trains of any continent—1918 was the last year you could have done that—you saw trailers, automobiles, droskies, carriages and jirikishies. Russians, Japanese, Chinese and Koreans predominated, with many Europeans, occasional Americans and Africans.

"A tongue of hilly land thrust out into a land-locked bay constitutes the site of 'The Mistress of the East.' The architecture maintains the European note struck by the station; which makes the presence of Oriental people, conveyances and customs all the more exotic. You no sooner ascended yourself to the dreary routine of bazaar buying, flourishing lotteries, and babel of tongues than you encountered the more familiar telegraph office, motion picture theater, museum, club and university. You may dodge a European racing car, under an American electric light, and run plump into a coolie burden bearer despite the warning cries of a Russian policeman. The 'Golden Horn' restaurant was the rendezvous of bon vivants of the world.

"In the way of exports, in its palmier days, it had nothing more important to give the world than sea-babbages, trepang and a fungus gathered from decayed wood for all of which China was its principal customer. Trepang is the dried body of the holothurian, more commonly known as the sea slug, more appealing to the curiosity than to the palate of the occidental. For this small-like creature can throw off, when frightened, its vital organs—digestive, respiratory and reproductive—and replace them all within a few weeks. Nature here seems to hold that two can live more easily, if not more cheaply, than one. When the sea slug becomes too hungry for comfort it divides in two parts and each, developing rapidly into complete units, goes on a search for food."

Both Teams of Each of Schools
Get Decision.

DATE FOR FINAL
CLASH UNDECIDED

Literary Committee of County Schools Meets Today To Make Arrangements.

Agosta, Martel and Pleasant township debating teams won in the triangular county school debate staged in the various schools of the county Friday evening on the question "Resolved, That Labor Should Participate both in the Management and in the Profits of Incorporated Industries."

Both the affirmative and negative teams of the three schools were victorious and in each instance the affirmative team debated on home territory.

The final debating contest for the county championship will be held in the near future, the date to be decided by the members of the literary committee which will meet late this afternoon. The county cup was won last year by the Agosta school.

The following is the debating schedule: First triangle, Martel at Caledonia, Waldo at Martel, Caledonia at Waldo.

Second triangle, Pleasant township at Green Camp, Green Camp at Morral, Morral at Pleasant township.

Third triangle, Agosta at LaRue,

STREET WILL BE EXTENDED SOUTH

About 2,500 Feet South
Mt. Vernon Avenue.

WORKS NOW
ARE BEING LAID

Will Be Built South to on Street—Street Will Be Paved.

Work of forty-two new lots by the extension of about 2,500 feet Mt. Vernon avenue will be a reality. Sewers were laid last year and the paved legislation authorizing the street extension is expected to be passed by May.

The work is being laid at the water and the laying of the water will be started within the next days. The street will be built to Jameson street and with south Summit Edgewood drive. Restricting a very desirable section are to be placed on first home to be constructed started within thirty days by company on the southwest corner of Forest and Mt. Vernon on Mt. Vernon avenue. built on a lot with a front of fifty feet and 150 feet is to be built colonial style a frontage of about fifty feet depth of about forty-two feet

It will be a frame structure and will have nine rooms. The attic and the basement are to be finished, and the house will be modern in every respect.

CLEARING BUILDINGS FROM NEW HOTEL SITE

House Facing Center Street Being Torn Down.

By the end of next week very little in the way of construction will be noticeable on the site where the Harding Hotel is to be located. The three-wing house facing on Center street is to be completely torn down.
It was purchased by John F. Aug-stein, No. 533 south Prospect street, and will be used to build an eight-room house on Garden street.

The double house in the center of the lot, facing on Orchard street, is also to be torn down and the lumber used in the construction of several houses now under way, by the purchaser, Albert J. Brady, No. 400 north Main street. The dismantling of the house was begun this morning.

The seven-room house in the rear of the lot facing on Orchard street was purchased by James Dugan and will be moved intact by him to the lot just north of his home, No. 201 Orchard street. Moving will be done as soon as the foundation on the lot is done, and it is thought that this will be completed next Tuesday or Wednesday. The lot to which the house is being moved is fifty feet by 165 feet.

It is planned to entirely remodel the house. It will be painted both inside and out and hardwood floors will be laid downstairs. French doors will be installed between the rooms downstairs. Electric lights, a furnace and a full cellar will be included in the construction. A front porch and an enclosed back porch will be built.
